Suspicious Activity

Overview

Suspicious activity detection refers to the process of identifying behavior or actions that deviate from the norm or expected patterns, and may indicate potential threats or risks.

In security, suspicious activity detection can help identify potential threats or breaches in systems, networks, or physical environments. This can involve monitoring of access logs, network traffic, user behavior, or physical activity using video surveillance or other sensors.

What's included in this suite:

- Loitering
- Unattended packages
- Aggressive behavior
- Vandalism & property destruction
- Firearms & knives
- Sexual harassments
- Solicitation
- Theft
- Shipping activity
- Intrusion detection